The percentage of non-sentenced inmates for the 2nd Quarter of 2002 was 62%. This percentage has been steadily rising since 1985 when only 49% of the inmates were non-sentenced. At its rate of growth over the last 20 years, the non-sentenced population could account for over 70% of the total inmate population within the next decade. This will have a considerable impact on many aspects of jail system design and management.
